1 PROJECT BACKGROUND AND APPLICATION PROCESS

1.1 Background

1.1.1 Purpose of the pro bono service offering

Dillon Consulting Limited (Dillon) is looking to leverage the knowledge and training of our staff to work with you on delivering a project that addresses food insecurity in Canada and supports the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal \(SDG\) 2 - zero hunger. As a signatory to the United Nations Global Compact, our Million Meals and Counting Campaign is part of our commitment to work to transform our world through principled business practices. As part of this campaign, we are looking for partners who understand the food crisis in Canada to identify potential projects where we can partner on and help deliver.

We are not only looking to provide as many meals as possible, but we are also looking to work on solving problems associated with the root causes of food insecurity and seeking to contribute to a transformation of the system for generations. We are issuing this pro bono service offering to solicit information on your problems or project ideas so that we may partner with those we are best able to support through our services.

This initiative is part of our commitment to being a good corporate citizen and our commitment to strengthening our local communities by donating a percentage of our earnings to environmental and charitable organizations.

Dillon is a Canadian, employee-owned, professional services firm providing a wide range of environmental management, planning, and engineering consulting services. Established with a single office in 1946, Dillon now operates from over 20 offices across Canada with a current complement of more than 1,000 employees with a wide variety of professional services. We are a group of problem solvers and for this application we are asking you to submit your problem and we will bring together a team of our specialists to work with you to deliver a solution

We at Dillon are problem solvers. We'll work together create a solution.

We work on a lot of different kinds of problems but generally, the types of client issues that we solve are divided into eight categories, which we refer to as business units. These business units are:

- Community Infrastructure
- Community Strategies
- Contaminated Sites Management
- Environmental Management
- Facilities
- Land Development
- Transportation
- Waste Management

Each of these business units are staffed by many skilled professionals such as engineers, planners, and environmental scientists. We will draw on the skills and training of employees across the country, as appropriate for whichever projects are selected to receive our pro bono service offering. Our presence across the country makes us capable of supporting projects in a wide variety of locations and our staff's variety of expertise means we are able to support a variety of activities.

1.2 Application Process

Stage 1 – Pre-screening: This is when you reach out to sustainability@dillon.ca to discuss the challenge your organization is trying to address.

Stage 2 – Application: Once you have established that Dillon has the skills to help you, fill out the application document and submit to sustainability@dillon.ca.

Our team has worked hard to make it a low effort document. We understand your time is best spent working on food insecurity issues. The information we collect helps provide clarity to our team as we assess and plan for the work.

Stage 3 – Acceptance and Co-Creation of the Project Plan: Once your application has been accepted you will work with Dillon's project team to make a plan to complete the work that fits with everyone's schedules.

1.2.1 How we are measuring success

Our success will be measured by the number of meals created by the projects we support. As part of Stage 1 of this call for application to receive pro bono services, we are asking organizations to tell us about the problem(s) they are looking to solve and who their work will impact (Section 3). A key component of this campaign is to not only provide meals but it is also to provide meals through projects that seek to address some of the root causes of food insecurity in Canada. In this way, we are looking to address problems we are open to direct and indirect meal creation and looking to support projects that can provide meals to people in need over many years.

1.2.2 Delivery method for pro bono services

The application will be a three-stage process in order to make it straightforward and efficient. This package represents Stage 2 of the application process. In the following sections, some brief questions will be asked to determine the type of problem you are hoping to address and gather some information on the potential impact of your project. We will also evaluate our ability to support the work required to address your problem.

We understand that this may be an atypical way for you to receive support for your work but we feel this is the way in which we can leverage our contribution to the food security community for maximal impact using this collaboration model. We will work to ensure the barrier to applying is not arduous and once selected for Stage 3 of the application process, we will work with you to ensure the details of the project planning are not too resource-intensive.
